PREFACE

Caldwell County, Kentucky was organized in 1809 and the first probate records concern the Original Settlers. These men and women had immigrated to the area and brought civilization to a wilderness. Many of the men had served in the Revolutionary War and came to the area soon after the land was opened to settlement in 1795. They were, principally, from the Carolinas, Virginia, Central Kentucky, and the Cumberland Settlements in Tennessee. The records are additionally important to historical and genealogical research since they also relate to many individuals who were soon located on a new frontier.

When Caldwell County was formed its area included all of the present county, what is now Lyon County, and until 1820 a portion of Trigg and Christian Counties. Early land records reflect a growing population with little mobility. Bounded by the Chickasaw Indian Lands and the near-by Illinois Territory, the geographic location precluded any appreciable expansion.

In 1819 a large migration began to Missouri, Illinois, the Purchase Area of Kentucky and Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi. Several factors encouraged this migration. In addition to the lure of new territory, there was an acute need for new homesteads. The original acreage occupied by the parents was usually not sufficient for their large families as the children reached maturity. Moreover, the area was in close proximity to the emerging states. Also, its residents had easy access to land and river transportation. The only road from the East and South to the West and North traversed Caldwell County. This road, established by the first settlers, became a major migrational route. A choice of direction was also provided by the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers which were, at this time, within the bounds of the county.

THIS VOLUME

This volume is composed of a complete abstract of all entries in two original manuscript books located in the office of the Caldwell County Court Clerk in Princeton, Kentucky. The books are titled WILL BOOK A 1809-1834 and INVENTORIES AND SETTLEMENTS, 1822-1830, and contain all instruments ordered to record by the county court of this period. Estate sale bills and appraisals and guardian accounts and settlements were also recorded.

The names of purchasers found on sale bills and the names listed in estate accounts are included. This list is of considerable research importance because it identifies persons who would not appear in the federal census of the period unless they were the heads of households.

PROCEDURE

The court procedure for the settlement of an estate began when administration was granted by the county court to an executor. This consisted of, in most instances, the approval and bonding of the person or persons so nominated in the will. If no will was offered for probate an administrator was appointed by the court. Appraisers were also appointed at this date to inventory and appraise the personal property. These men were usually neighbors of the deceased. It was not required that they appear before the court and in most instances they were sworn before the justice-of-the-peace who represented their district on the county court. This procedure also applied to the commissioners who were appointed to assist the executors of an estate with the public sale, and to supervise the settlement and distribution of assets among the heirs.
